

LINGUÆ LATINÆ

LIBER DICTIONARIUS

Quadripartitus.

A LATINE

DICTIONARY,

In FOUR PARTS,

I. An Engliſh-Latine.
II. A Latine-Claſſical.
III. A Latine-Proper.
IV. A Latine-Barbarous.

WHEREIN

The Latine and Engliſh are adjuſted, with what care might be, both as to Stock of Words and Proprieties of Speech.

PARTICULARLY,

1. In the Engliſh-Latine, more Words and Proprieties of our Language, as now ſpoken, are ſet down, by ſeveral Thouſands, than in any other Dictionary yet extant.
2. In the Latine-claſſick, the Etymologies, Significations, and Phraſes are fully and plainly, yet briefly, diſcourſed; together with the ſeveral Kinds and Conſtructions of the Verbs; a thing hitherto not much regarded.
3. In the Latine-proper, the Expreſſions of Story, which were taken moſtly out of COOPER, are much amended; and many uſeful things are now added, which were formerly omitted; with two Mapps, one of ITALY, another of old ROME.
4. In the Latine-barbarous, thoſe words which through Miſtake of writing have been corrupted from the Latine, or by Ignorance or Boldneſs of later Authors have crept into the Latine, are expoſed and expounded.

And in all Four Parts, many things that were utterly impertinent and cumberſom to School-Inſtitution and to the true uſes of Learning, are laid aſide.

Of all which ſeveral performances, together with conſiderable Additions of new matter by way of Appendage to the main Work, a fuller Accomt is given in the Prefaces.

Erudito Lectori S.

Barbarus meritò censerer, utpote qui parùm ex Romana fide agerem, si Te Lector Erudite, sub initiis hujusce commentationis, quæ tota fermè in Latino sermone explicando versatur, aut insalutatum præterirem, aut unà cum populo vernaculè compellarem. Te nimirum secundùm Regem mihi Patronum advoco, Te operis Arbitrum volo. Non est quidem, quur mihi ad defensionem Galeato Prologo opus esse existimem, Augustæ Majestatis patrocinio clypeatus. Verùm quum tam perversi sint mores seculi, ut optima quæque calumniæ notam vix effugere queant, & nonnullorum invidiam vel ipsa bene merendi voluntas commoveat; non erit mirum, si hic noster in tenui labor, utut à laudabili consilio profectus, non se satis omnibus ex omni parte probare norit. Neque deerunt fortè, qui me pipilo diffient. Dicent me hominem Theologum alienam à munere meo personam induisse, qui, postquam Theologiæ nomen dederim, ad Grammaticorum rursus subsellia provocem, & in Dictionariis conscribillandis operam abutar. Porrò nec ipsam rem esse usque adeò necessariam, cùm & plus satis suppetat hujus farinæ scriptorum, quibus juventur (dicam an distrahantur) studiosi, & ego in hoc argumento nihil sit quod afferam novi. De Me primùm dicam, deinde de Re.

Ad Me quod attinet; si sacris initiato non liceat in publicum consulere, si homini mei ordinis juventuti prodesse, remp. literariam promovere nefas sit; habent fatentem reum. In hunc ego scopum unicè animum intendi, huc collimârunt cogitationes & curæ meæ omnes, hoc quantum in me erat per hasce temporis angustias & varias officiorum intercursationes aliaque incommoda elaboravi. Quòd si minùs istum finem usquequaque assecutus videar, fiquando (quod humanitùs fieri solet) ab istoc instituto aberrem; ignoscet mihi ea, quæ pectoribus solidâ & genuinâ eruditione imbutis, & generoso honesto incoctis ultrò innascitur, humanitas. Nec illud tacendum, quòd hisce studiis à primâ adolescentiâ innutritus, post vicennalem demum, & quod excurrerat, operam in palæstrâ Grammaticâ navaram, non omninò imparatus, nec rudis rerum, sed probè exercitatus ad hanc provinciam accesserim. Quur enim me pudeat aut pœniteat, literas didicisse, vel etiam docuisse? Erat illa non minima Scholasticæ institutionis labes & corruptelarum in re Dictionaria scaturigo, homines Scholarum regimini insuetos & in docendi methodo ferè peregrinos, dum adulterina & subleſtæ fidei vocabula supponunt pro veris & legitimis; dum consusaneos & tralatitios sensus vocibus affingunt; verbo, dum vetera errata cumulant novis; pueritiam nostram ludibrio habitam in infinitos passim errores traduxisse. His ego malis, quà licuit, mederi volui, tesquis & dumetis aut runcinatis stirpitùs aut collucatis, luxuriosâ sensuum propagine recisâ & in nativum ordinem jugatâ, vitiisque sermonis, quæ per imperitiam vel incuriam irrepserant, suas sibi res habere jussis: quod si minùs præstiterim, aperui saltem feneſtram aliis, qui meo exemplo edocti efficient aliquando, ut Linguæ Latinæ promptuarium quàm purgatissimum prodeat.

Habeo aliquid ex me majus & majoris momenti, quanquam hoc ipsum, quod dixi modo, sit maximi. Erit, si mihi bonus Deus vitæ spatium concesserit, ubi in alia divertar, ad quæ commodior, hoc Progymnasmate qualitercunque peracto, dabitur transitus. In alto nimirum fundamenta locant, qui volunt extruere in altum. Adeò si meâpte solius gratiâ hic labor à me susceptus fuisset, erat haud pœnitendus.

Accedo jam ad ipsam Rem; cujus opportunitatem, si nihil aliud, vel ipsa scriptorum in hoc ipso genere multitudo evicerit. Latine quidem doctis & in re literaria aliquousque provectis prospectum erat satis dudum in uno Calepino, cujus Compendium edidit Wasæus noster consilio non malo, eoque judicio, ut vix quidquam uspiam in eo reperias, quod Barbariem respiret. Ille, Calepinus inquam, & sincerius proponit voces, earumque significata accuratiùs distinguit & rariùs ea admiscet monstra & prodigia vocum, quàm pleriq; qui eum secuti. De nostratium plerisq; ut loquar, alia res est. Aliud his consilium, aliud ferè institutum; qui vocabula omnia undecunq; collecta, quomodocunq; corrupta & interpolata, in peculium Latinitatis transcripserunt: perinde ac si moles librum non usus commendaret. Qua de re nonnihil dico in Præfatione ad Glossarium. In hujus rei fidem unum allego Cooperum, qui uti præclaram æquè ac fructuosam operâ locabat in explicandâ puritate sermonis ex idoneis auctoribus desumptâ; ità in reliquis adspotis miserè fallebat simul & fallebatur, ut nemo magis. Non jam ad alios descendo. Neq; enim aut aliena vituperare aut nostra jactantiùs prædicare animus est. Quid à nobis præstitum sit, Alloquio ad Populares sigillatim docemus. D. Goldmanno, qui mihi proximè præivit, (siquid ego novi hominem, dubiũ magisne probum an erũditũ senem, antiqua fide & moribus, atq; tum temporis, cùm id negoti in se reciperet, Regiarum partium rerum,) non erat integrum facere quæ vellet; quippe qui ageret ex formulâ & præscripto, uti loquuntur Jureconsulti; non quo vetera corrigeret, sed adjiceret nova; magis adeò ut in quæstũ Sostis, quàm Lectoribus in commodum cederet grandius volumen.

Superest, ut rationem consilii, quo Latino-barbara à Classicis secrevi, tibi, Lector Erudite, reddam; quod non feci aliquo novitatis obtentu (erat enim & veteris instituti) sed serio & ex vero. Illud utiq; minimè ferendũ est, quòd aliqui Latinitatis latifundium nullâ macerià claudi, nullis limitibus coerceri patiantur; quinimo temerè omnia civitate donari postulent, quæ vel infimæ notæ & sequioris ævi scriptor aliquis proletarius usurpârit. Enimverò uti cives ipsi in censũ venire et profiteri apud Prætorem debebant, ità & verborum delectus agendus est. Neq; tamen aut strictè nimis aut nimis laxè res hæc erat tentanda. De iis quæ florente Româ viguerunt, nemo est qui dubitet. Sed nec ea Classe secludi & loco moveri decebat, quæ vel veteribus, Accio putà, Pacuvio, Ennio, &c. in usu erant, utut mox, ante Augustæum saltem ævũ, in desuetudinem abierint; quæ vel Plautus deridiculi gratiâ effinxit; vel quæ deniq; eruditorum usus renascentibus literis adprobavit, aut etiam deinceps adprobaturus est. Grammaticis porrò melioris notæ is honos habendus, ut quicquid illi adducunt etiam citra veterũ auctoritatem, in Classe reponatur; adferunt enim suam, Reliqua in Glossarium meritò relegenda; in quo si diligentiã meam desideras, quòd non toto thylaco, quod aiunt disseverim; id idcò sciens feci, quòd jam plena messi, prout accepi, istiusmodi vocabulorum sudet sub prælo Lutetiæ Parisiorum.

Statuerã aliquando adjunxisse huic operi Apparatum Philologicum, in quo exactiori trutina universa simul expenderem, ad certos Analogiæ canones redacta; quæ sparsim tributa nimis longũ fuisset singula ad id examen vocare. Verùm quum ea res morã desideraret, coactus ab eo cœpto desistere in aliud tempus reservo seorsim fortean, ubi vacabit, edendum.

TO THE English Reader.

THe Travail of this Work having been Undertaken and Performed mainly for thy sake, for the Common Benefit of my Country; I mean, for the Help and Advantage of Learners, though I hope too not altogether to the Dissatisfaction of the Learned: I judg I cannot acquit my Duty only in a Latine Address, wherein none but Scholars can be concerned; unless I do also in plain English give an account of my self, which may be understood by all. And here I shall not need to make an Historical deduction of Dictionaries, the Use and Necessity whereof is unquestionable, as being one of the most considerable instruments of Institution, if rightly prepared, and fairly applied to. Nor have I the Vanity or ill nature to design my own Commendation by casting the least Disparagement or Reflection upon any of Those who have gone before us in Enterprises of this kind, to whose labours and diligence we rather willingly own an Obligation. But since it is free for any man to Deserve well of the Publick, it is but necessary, both as to Civility and Prudence, to lay before thee an account of the Work, what hath been done in it, (it being a Work of such a nature, that as it is intended for General Good, so it is subjected to every ones Particular Censure) that so seeing what is to be expected from it, thou maist neither be too forward in Censuring the Author, nor too backward in Valuing the Work.

In the main then I must tell thee, that though we do travel all along in the old beaten Road of Alphabet, that being the usual Method of such Books, and that which is most agreeable and easie to Youth, and no less conducive to their studies by speeding their inquiries: Yet there is enough offered all along to the judgment of the severest Criticks, by continual supplements, amendments, and the like through all the Veins of the Work, what for matter, what for manner of handling it, as may abundantly justifie the Tenure of this Book to be as free from incroaching upon any others Copyhold, as any that has been writ in English of this kind since Thomasius his time.

To this end it hath been our great Aim, to carry the purity of the Latine Tongue throughout, and consequently our no less Care, not to take things or words upon trust, so as to transcribe others mistakes, and (as it happens in all Traditionary knowledg) to add our own to them. Wherefore where we could have the opportunity of more certain information from the Authors themselves, we have not spared our pains in applying to them; where That was wanting, we held our selves bound to name Those, who have vouched their Authority.

Further, whereas there have not been wanting some, who have thought it the greatest credit of their Labours, the more Words they could amass together, however they came by them; as we do not envy those of that design their due esteem, so we may withal affirm, that for this, which they account a Master-piece, to wit, for variety of Collections, and number of true current Words, This present Work in all its Parts doth not yield to any Former.

And for this which hath been said in the General, I humbly refer my self to any unprejudiced Reader, who shall give himself the trouble of comparing what is here done, with what has been before. But this is not all the Business we are to speak to, as will appear in the Character and Lineaments of the Particular pieces severally.

In the English-Latine Dictionary; having considered the Improvements of our Language, age, since Reverend Cooper's time, both as to the Inlarging and to the Refining of it, we have endeavoured to lay down the whole Body of it as now spoken, and to fit it, as well as we might, all over with a suitable Latine habit. Hereupon several thousands of Words and Proprieties formerly wanting are here set down.

The several Notions and importances of words are distinctly and orderly reckoned up, as near as may be, according to the method of their Natural dependence; especially those of Verbs, as they are variously applied; and that either as they stand alone, or as they draw after them little Particles, in, out, on, off, up, down, &c. which is the English way of Composition, Wherein no small assistance hath been afforded us by the Reverend Dr. Lloyd, Dean of Bangor, in his Philosophical Dictionary at the end of Bishop Wilkins his Universal Character.

The Idiotisms and Proprieties of Speech, which by standing at that distance they do from Latine, are so apt to puzzle Youth, and the Particles, wherein the elegance and difficulty of Most Languages mainly lies, have been much enlarged; to which, besides our own observation, we had here and there some help from Mr. Walker's Treatises on those Subjects, and might have had much more, but that we saw the Work would by that means have grown too big upon us.

To make room for such useful Additions and necessary Supplies for our present occasion of discourse, we thought it not so much Injury to our Grandfathers, as Advantage to our Children, to lay aside some old-fashioned Words, now grown out of all use; such as Abastick, &c. and to disward many uncouth Expressions and insignificant Circumlocutions; as The inward top of the finger next to the Nail, and the like: Though of the old words too we have retained as many at least, as do really belong to the English Stock.

The Names of Herbs, Trees, Stones, Beasts, Birds and Fishes, &c. we have by Retail distributed into the common Alphabet; remembring we are not now upon a Nomenclature, which reduces Things under their Heads, but a Dictionary, which marshals words by order of Letters.

Lastly, for distinction sake, Terms of Law, Physick, Navigation, Architecture, Heraldry, and others of uncommon use are marked with a Cross; thus †. And those that are of an immediate discent from the Latine, with a Star; thus *.

In the Latine-Classick, besides the Etymology, Signification, and Use of each word, (to which three Heads the whole nature of Speech well-near is reduced) besides this some other things are done, which took up some time and thought too, though at first they might be looks on as slight Instances: As namely.

That the kind and quality of the Word, whether Noun, Verb, &c. is every where almost set down.

That the Hebrew has been continued through the whole Work.

That Primitives, as the leading words, are put into Capitals for honors sake.

That where the English word comes from the Latine, which it expounds, it is put into the black English Letter.

That words manifestly taken out of the Greek, especially if they retain their declining too, are noted with an Asterisk *. And that words Obsolete, to be met with only in the rubbish of antient Writers, and Terms peculiar to particular Sciences, though used by approved Authors, yet as not fit for School-use, are marked with an Obelisk †.

These things, as they will, we presume, be helpful to the younger sort; so will not, we hope, give offence to those who need not such Remarks.

But then as to the more serious concern. In giving the Etymons, wherein we have been obliged to be the larger by others Example rather than our own Judgment, (that being looked on as a point of skill, wherein both old Grammarians and late Criticks have taken so much pains) we have endeavoured to be close and pertinent; as resolving no great matter of Learning to lie in forced and affected derivations, unless they may be brought to some true measures of Analogy.

The

The Significations of words are adjusted, as near as might be to the present English expression, and deduced orderly along; beginning either with that which is the most natural and proper importance, or with that which is the most ordinary and common.

The Use, more especially of Verbs, is represented in such pertinent Instances, as to shew at once their Grammatical Construction and Government, together with the Latine Propriety or Phrase.

Another help to find out the true value and force of words being the observation of Synonyma's (i. e. words of a like sense) and Antitheta's (i. e. words of a contrary meaning) Those are here noted with peculiar marks, the former thus ; = : the latter thus ; ⁜.

In the Latine-Proper we have so handled History, Poetick Fiction, and Geography, as to confine them, what we might, though overborn with Precedents, even down from Stephanus himself, (out of whom the rest have taken most of theirs) within the compass of Latine Classick Writers, unless the matter it self were any where so considerable, as to give some instance of useful or delightful knowledge. Wherefore we have cashiered hence many Names mentioned only by Greek Writers, Herodotus, Paufanias, Suidas, &c. and many of them only mentioned; to put things of more use in their room. For those Persons and Places, that are of any Eminence and Note, Hebrew or Greek as well as Roman, we have taken notice of, and given some of them the respect of Capital Letters.

The English Stories, which are up and down large, and are in many Schools made use of for Dictamens, having been taken out of Eliot and Cooper, and continued in that old-fashioned Language, we have here and there amended and somewhat refined by bringing them nearer to our present dress.

Where we found it necessary, we have given the Gender and the Genitive Case, as knowing by experience that Children are often more at a loss in declining a Noun Proper then Common.

In the Geographical part special care hath been taken of bringing the Modern names to those used by the Ancients and Romans; and these latter most of them in a compleat List returned back again, the English before the Latine, after the English-Latine Dictionary.

For the Glossary or Latine-Barbarous words we have already given an account to our Learned Reader; nor can any right-bred Latinist take offence to see them thrown into a Lay-stall by themselves. For how hard soever it may be to set the Boundaries of the Roman Language; yet it is, we are assured, as possible to distinguish words Classical from those that are not such, as it is necessary for Youth that they should be so distinguished.

Herein we bestow many such words as our Glosses have help us to; such as by mispelling, or other mistakes even of Dictionary-makers themselves, have served only to swell the bulk of our common Dictionaries: of which we have more at large discoursed in the Preface before the Glossary.

Moreover, those terms which have been either devised or coined out of the Latine, Greek, or Vulgar Tongues by Schoolmen, Civilians, Physicians, &c. of later times and meaner note are ranked here (for to the more eminent of these we allow a place in the Class,) unless they are grown to be of common use, and have some more than ordinary importance.

As to the Chymical terms of Paracelsus (which have formerly pestered Latinity) and other strange words used by men of his Tribe, which have no affinity with Latine or Greek, they are wholly omitted, and not so much as set down among the Barbarous.

Nor is this Omission any disadvantage at all to the Latine Tongue, with which such Writers have little to do in those Adventures; who also, if they intend to be understood, have provided Claves and Keys of their own, whereby their Readers may understand them. Nor ought it to be imputed as a blemish or defect to a Dictionary, that the Writer thereof did not think fit to take up all the Gibrish, that any sort of Canters have invented to amuse people, and to conceal their own notions.

Let it suffice thee, Reader, that thou hast here the whole body of the Latine Tongue, with all its natural and genuine branches, delivered to thee; whereby thou maist be inabled to speak and write Latine by the same Authority as the Romans themselves spoke and wrote it, when Rome was at her heighth. For as to those words, which thou missest here, and meetest with elsewhere, thou must know that they being but corruptions and abuses of Latine, are better let alone then taken notice of.

In the last place; the better to acquaint thee with Roman Antiquity and Historie, I have furnished thee with some small helps by themselves; viz.

The Description of old Italy and Rome, as well as so narrow a Page could present them.

Their Kalender with their Feasts, Games, &c.

A brief account of their Weights, Coins, and Measures.

A compendious Chronological Table of famous Persons and memorable Actions.

Together with the Abbreviatures used by the Ancient Romans in their Inscriptions and Monuments.

Amongst other things added to this Work, thou hast a brief Abstract of our Common-Law-Terms; wherein I must beg the favour of all the Gentlemen of that Honourable Profession to believe I had not the least design of exposing their Mystery; but only to give some small assistance to the younger Students, who shall light upon this Book. They are words that having been derived to us down from Britans, Saxons, Danes, Normans, in ancient Deeds, Charters, and other Records, &c. have become necessary to the understanding and practice of our Municipal Laws; and though many of them appear to be and indeed are Barbarous, yet they are such as require great knowledg to explain them: witness the Writings of learned Spelman, Cowel, and others upon them. And to speak my deepest resentments, that duty I owe to my Worthy Progenitor who wrote the Tenures, was alone of force enough to have kept me from any disingenuous reflections upon those skills, of which he hath been always acknowledged to have been so able a Master.

Reader, I have, as I promised thee in the beginning, given thee an Account of my Intendments and Endeavours in this performance; and if it hath (as I am too conscious to my self it often hath) happned, that I have any where failed of my design; if in a long and tedious Work I have through inadvertency, streights of time, and hurry sometimes of other business, made any balk, and committed mistakes, let thy Humanity excuse the humane Infirmities of

faithful Servant,

Explicantur.

A Princeps Alphabeti litera, quòd ex ipsâ oris aperturâ cum leni ſpiritu ſponte ſuâ prodeat: unde factum, ut in omnibus omnium gentium Alphabetis quæ hactenus videre contigit, ordinem literarum ducat; excepto uno Æthiopico ſive Abyſſino, in quo inira (quod ad ordinem ſpectat) Elementorum confuſio. Hinc fortean & Angli ſuis Nominibus Articuli loco præponunt voculam A; quâ ſcil. aperitur primùm os, quò facilior ſit pronunciatio; v. g. a Man, a Book, a Horſe: quæ res neq; Græcis ignota, qui id aliquando κῆ σαφέσθην tentârunt; uti ϛάκχος, ὄτακχος· σπάσας, ἀσπάσ. ϛ. A, a. Græcè, Α, α. Heb. א. Anglicè, A, a Vocalium meritò prima, quòd ſit ſoni ſimpliciſſimi ac facillimæ pronunciationis; quamobrem & Pathach Hebræorum Magiſtris dicitur iſthæc Vocalis, q. d. ipſa oris apertio: quum cæteræ vocales loquentium fauces vel in arctum conſtringant; ut E, I. vel colligant in rotundum; ut O, U. unde & ipſis iidem Magiſtri congrua indidêre vocabula, de quibus vide ſuo loco. Reſpondent itaq; noſtræ a cùm litera א, (Aleph) tum vocalis Pathach, ſive Gallorum more pronuncies Kamets, quam antiquiores Grammatici Pathach majorem indigitant; quæ ſonat ferè au & propius accedit ad o: quod nec Latini reſpuunt, ut caupo copo ex Gr. κάπηλος. Figuram ſuam A a, uti pleræque omnes Latinorum literæ, Græcis acceptam refert: quod in majuſculis magis eſt conſpicuum; nam minuſcule aliquanto longiùs recedunt. Nomen autem, ſicuti & reliquæ, ſortita eſt à ſono ſive nudâ pronunciatione, in hunc modum, ſcil. a, be, ce. quod vel ex ipſo nomine hinc effecto patet, Abcedarius. Enimverò Græci ſua Literarum nomina ab Hebræis mutuati ſunt, mediante Chaldæorum dialecto, & hæc quidem ſunt ſignificativæ utplurimùm. Sic A ipſis dicitur Ἄλφα, Heb. אלף, Aleph, Chald. אלפא, Alpha quod & bovem & ducem ſignificat, nim. quòd hæc Litera caput bovinum apicibus ſuis, tanquam cornibus, repræſentet, & in ſerie Elementari principem obtineat locum. Porrò A præpoſita aliis vocalibus tres conſtituit diphthongos, Æ, Aï, Aü; ut æs, aio, aurum: quomodo Græcè tres iidem ſunt, αι, αυ, & impropria α, cujus loco ſucceſſit ε, ità tamen ut univerſa ferè in as ſui etiam juris fecerit; ut δαίμων dæmon, ἀήν, æquum, &c. prout etiam vice verſâ Cæſar Græcis Κάισαρ dicitur, Gr. Sanè in Dativis læ pro α ſive ῃ (quod ex Doriſmo ſit α) conſtanter ponitur æ; ut Ἀινείᾳ Ἀινεᾶ, φήμη Dor. φάμα fama, &c. Nec immeritò æ Latina utriuſq; dipthongi Græcè vicem ſuſtinet, quum αι & ε hoc tantùm differant, quòd altera habeat [ι] adſcriptum, altera ſubſcriptum. At ai rarenter in Latinis dictionibus viſitur; aio, Cæſar, &c. & videtur potius eſſe ſynæreſis quàm dipthongus; quod, ſi Græcanicè ſcripſeris, liquidò parebit, ſic; ἄϊο, ΓάϊΟ. Nim. ut ab ἄϊω ipſi Græci faciunt ἀΐω· ità ab aio Latini aio.
